About the city

Bishkek is the capital of Kyrgyzstan and the country's largest city in terms of population (over 1 million). The capital of Kyrgyzstan, Bishkek, is the borderline of Central Asia's Tian Shan range. The Kyrgyz Ala-Too mountains and Ala-Archa National Park adorned with wildlife trails and glaciers, concludes the scenic beauty of the place. Bishkek is the modern cultural, political and economic center of the country. It is a quiet city with wide streets and beautiful houses with its own distinctive, measured rhythm of life.

Bishkek was founded in 1825 on the ruins of the ancient Pishpek hill fort and the Kokand fortress of Pishpek, which were county trade towns on the caravan route from the 7th to the 13th centuries. The caravans of the Great Silk Road also passed through Bishkek. The rapid development of the city began after 1917. In 1926, in honor of the revolutionary and statesman, Pishpek was renamed Frunze, and then it was renamed back to Bishkek after the fall of the USSR and the gaining independence of the Kyrgyz Republic.

Filled with exotic foliage and historic post-Soviet anachronisms, Bishkek is a city engraved with cultural nuances. The vibrant and youthful atmosphere of the place is the reason why the city witnesses a massive tourist turnout every year. The pulsating nightlife of Kyrgyzstan's capital city is unparalleled. They they way to one's heart is through the stomach. If that's the case, then the city's food scene is definitely going to ring a bell. Be it the mouthwatering Oromo or the tasteful Besh Barmak, one is served with a myriad of food choices.
